Adobe Fireworks Adobe Fireworks is a vector-based and web-based workflow program that can create Flash and HTML5 web graphics. You can use Fireworks to create web graphics, logos, icons, and any other type of design that you can imagine. It's got a feature set that rivals any graphics program, and it works in all major operating systems as a plug-in for both Adobe Creative Suite programs and any other web or graphic designers that you work with. For example, Fireworks imports from Adobe InDesign, Illustrator, Photoshop, and even WordPress, as well as creating vectors from any type of source, such as raster images. Fireworks can be used in two ways: You can export the files to other programs and make them into a web graphic, or you can use the program as a full web graphics suite where you

Controlling the color of a semiconductor device during fabrication is a necessary and integral part of fabricating semiconductor devices. Color change is usually achieved by altering the dopant concentration of the doped regions. Since these dopants (usually metallic impurities) are preferably positioned very near the surface of the semiconductor, they are usually directly on or very near to the surface of the semiconductor. In order to avoid introducing any defects to the semiconductor surface during fabrication, it is desirable to avoid providing the doped regions in very close proximity to the semiconductor surface. For some types of doped regions, it is possible to leave the doped regions a sufficient distance below the surface of the semiconductor to be free from surface defects. For example, for P-type or N-type polysilicon gates formed by resist reflow or reactive ion etching techniques, it is desirable to leave the polysilicon gates a sufficient distance away from the semiconductor surface to avoid creating surface defects, but do not leave the polysilicon gates too great a distance away from the semiconductor surface to avoid increasing the overall gate resistance of the resulting gate. It is desirable to have the region of polysilicon below the gate remain doped in order to ensure the gate is conducting. To provide a high surface conductivity, it is desirable to have the doped regions of the semiconductor surface formed very close to or even in contact with the semiconductor surface. Therefore, in many semiconductor fabrication processes, the color of a doped region cannot be controlled without shortening the distance between the region and the surface of the semiconductor. Another important advantage of the present invention is that the doped region can, for a given processing step, be formed either in a region directly under the overlying photoresist or in a region that is first made by a previous processing step. Since many processing steps need to be done to form the doped region, it is convenient to have access to both the first and the second regions, so that multiple doped regions can be formed during a single processing step. The first region provides the possibility of a high surface conductivity, but does not create any surface defects. In the second region, surface defects can occur. It is desirable to have both regions located close to the surface of the semiconductor. Thus, the present invention provides a method for simultaneously forming the first and second doped regions of a semiconductor device. There are several well known techniques for creating doped regions of

Q: Log a user out of a site when a user activity not there When a user browses a secured page on my site, and he goes to another page, and then returns to the secured one a couple of days later, he finds his session has been logged out. This doesn't happen if the user simply closes his browser. I want him to be redirected to the log in page, and I don't want him to be logged in. A: Use an Apache RewriteRule to force a logout. Create a Logout.php file and put it in your "public" folder with the following code in it: Then, on your secured pages, use the following code to redirect on return to logout.php: RewriteRule ^/login/?$ "" [L,R=301] If you don't want to allow the user to use the same account on multiple accounts, you can add a UserID to the URL, use the following code: RewriteRule ^/login/([^\s/]+)$ "" [L,R=301] Note: Change the in the above code with your userid. Q: How does this set theory proof that \mathbb{N} has no maximum element work? I'm reading this proof and don't understand the end part, specifically what the part in bold means in the last line. So far I understand that the first line shows \mathbb{N} has elements k
